mining congress convention:

An unique tribute to the press was contained in the report made to the war department by Brigadier General H. H. Bandholtz, to whom was entrusted the pacification of the coal mining counties of West Virginia. As the climax to his recital of the circumstances which led him to believe there would be no further disorder, and in support of his rec ommendation that martial law be not declared, he said:

"Many newspaper correspondents are leaving, which would seem to indicate they consider the situation no longer menacing." It is a far cry from Kitchener who contemptuously included the correspondents in an order sending all "camp followers" to the rear, to Bandholtz, who as the general in
